

The 20th Annual Symposium of the International Cannabinoid Research ICRS2010 Lund, Sweden July 23 - 27, 2010

The 20th annual symposium on the cannabinoids 2010 was organized by ICRS in Lund Sweden on 23th to 27th of July 2010. There were 250 participants all over the world.

During the 5 day symposium we heard a lot of presentations. Oral presentations were divided into 9 sessions and there were 4 poster sessions where researchers and graduate students from various universities and companies presented their latest findings in the field of cannabinoids. Most of the presentations were about cannabinoid receptor (CB) 1 and 2. Personally I was interested in GPR55 receptor and there were some interesting presentations about it.

Since it was my first scientific meeting my goal was to learn more about my research field. This meeting made me to realize how wide this research field is and how an extensive area of this field is still unexplored. It was a great experience to see the faces behind the names and get an opportunity to discuss with people that have same interest during dinners and coffee breaks. This symposium gave me a lot of ideas and perspective and I am really grateful that I had an opportunity to participate.

I want to thank ISB for supporting my trip to ICRS symposium Lund.
